Theory and History of Education	25858	autumn	KIDE	Pedagogical theories constitute the fundaments of the training of every teacher. Theory and History of Education aims at presenting students with different contemporary pedagogical paradigms and perspectives so as to recognize the theoretical and epistemological basis that underpin current educational practices. This subject seeks, on the one hand, to address the contemporary pedagogical thought by evaluating the most significant movements, and, on the other, to analyse the historical development of the Educational System attending to its International and national dimension, in order to contextualize educational practices and the birth of those different pedagogical ideas and movements. One of the main objectives of this subject is, by means of critical and reflective readings and debates, to provide our students with the indispensable theoretical tools to start building their own pedagogical discourse.
