NATURE IN SOCIAL EDUCATION
Module 1: Nature, Health, and Outdoor Activities		autumn/spring	KIDE	The module is an introduction to the Danish welfare system and the pedagogical practice focusing on learning, development, cultural formation, care, and socialization of children and youth in a democratic society. The module especially focuses on the importance of including health, movement, nature, and the outdoor environment in pedagogical practice. The goal for the student is to investigate why and how to manage and develop pedagogical processes with a focus on nature experiences and understanding and on body and health in an outdoor environment.	Creation of Images and Objects	KIDE24NA12A03	III
					The Methodology of Environmental Studies	KIDE24NA10A02	IV
Module 2: Practicum		autumn/spring	KIDE	The module consists of preparation for practicum and three weeks of practicum completed by a reflection and examination period. The learning environment of the practicum period enables and supports the student's learning and experiences with examining, implementing, developing and adding perspective to pedagogical work at the specific practicum institutions. These learning processes take place in interaction with the target group of the practicum institution, as well as with colleagues.	Individual agreement
Module 3: Co-creation and citizenship		autumn/spring	KIDE	The module is focusing on pedagogical knowledge and competence to act in collaborative creation and citizenship. It contains knowledge about the global and local development of the welfare society and the social, historical, institutional, and professional context for pedagogical work and the relationship of such work with and in cooperation with related professions. The achieved knowledge is important in planning, implementation, documentation, and evaluation of a project within pedagogical practice, with emphasis on collaborative creation with relevant parties and pedagogical environments and activities that contribute to citizenship and democratic education.
